Assessment methods

Details of the assessment pattern for each module are explained in the module outline.

Teaching on the September programme follows the normal university calendar although resits will be held within a month of the semester 2 assessment period. Teaching on the January programme starts in January and has two 12 week semesters with a two week break over Easter. Resits will again be held within a month of the second semester of the programme assessment period.

Further to Undergraduate Regulation 51 concerning the timing of second attempt assessments, it is confirmed that they may take place before the August/September period on the recommendation of an interim progress board.
Progression to Newcastle University degree programmes.

Performance higher than a basic pass (in both academic modules and English for Academic Purposes) will be required for entry into Newcastle University degree programmes as specified in the progression requirements for specific degree programmes.
