10	Programme Aims	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. To provide students with the opportunity to combine high quality scholarship in the field of Media Studies at Newcastle University with first-rate vocational training in multi-media journalism, delivered by Press Association tutors in a commercial publishing environment.2. To provide a programme that complies with the University's policies and procedures for assuring and enhancing academic quality and standards.3. To enhance the academic and professional skills of graduates and media practitioners at postgraduate level by providing them with the opportunity to engage in serious academic study and intensive training a) by enhancing their understanding of the social, cultural, economic and political contexts in which news production and journalistic processes work, b) to advance their understanding of theoretical and cultural aspects of media production, and c) to obtain intensive and rigorous training in multi-media journalism to acquire an advanced set of skills in media practice. These skills will be fostered through compulsory modules at Newcastle University in Media Law and Writing for the Media and further compulsory modules at the Press Association in Broadcast and Video Journalism, Advanced Reporting Skills and Online Journalism.4. To provide students with access to the high quality training, industry-standard media facilities and the national reputation of the Press Association as trainers of Journalists and offer a learning environment which fosters dynamic entrepreneurial links with established and developing regional and national media and culture industries.5. To provide students with a learning environment where the relationship between theory and practice is constantly interrogated. The compulsory module, Media Analysis, enables this kind of inquiry through the study of the relationship between cultural and technological production; the study of the shaping of media technology by cultural and political imperatives; the study of the impact of the Internet on society and the ways in which this new medium is reshaping our approach to 'news', 'messages', 'information', 'entertainment'. Similar processes can also be found in several optional modules, which examine some of these issues in more depth, such as News and Journalism: Critical Studies, and Globalisation and National Culture, Television Studies, Broadcasting and Audience Studies.6. To provide students with a theoretical understanding of the most recent developments in New Media in the context of new professional practices in journalism, notably the development of multimedia and online journalism. These issues are addressed by the compulsory module Media Analysis by examining the shift from traditional to new media; by examining the changing relationship between media and individuals/society; by assessing emerging interactive features of new media and the multi-media aspects of production and of consumption by viewers/readers/audiences. The issues of multi-media in production and consumption, and in the global environment of social change are addressed in various contexts in optional modules such as Television Studies, Broadcasting and Audience Studies, Globalisation and National Culture, News and Journalism, Visual Culture.

7. To provide students with the theoretical and conceptual tools required to engage in a comprehensive analysis of media institutions, media information and media audiences in a global context.
8. To enable student to acquire a sophisticated knowledge and understanding of the principles, practices and products of journalism and thereby develop professional skills in the context of a critical analysis of the media at a national and trans-national level.
9. To advance the academic ability of media practitioners at postgraduate level by providing them with the opportunity not only to extend and develop their practitioner skills as media practitioners but also their academic knowledge by a) enhancing their understanding of the social, cultural, economic and political contexts in which news production and journalistic processes work, and b) gaining rigorous conceptual skills in the study of media and cultural theory in order to attain a sophisticated understanding of the academic field of media and journalism.
10. To offer the university an opportunity to develop a reputation for excellence in rapidly growing media economies such as India in collaboration with an industry partner, the Press Association which has an established and expanding presence in the media sector in India.
11. To maximise the recruitment potential of the School and take full advantage of its existing teaching and research strengths and resources. As such, the programme will build upon the success of the existing Masters programmes, Media and Journalism and Media and Public Relations which underpin this programme by sharing all existing compulsory and option modules with this new programme.
12. To contribute to the School's objective of internationalising its programmes by fostering the recruitment of international students and internationalising the content of programmes.
13. To take advantage of the expertise of a highly research-active team in media and cultural studies whose research publications benefit students by being cutting edge,
14. To draw on the international background and research of the teaching team by addressing media themes and issues in a global context.
15. To provide a programme with learning outcomes that corresponds to those defined by the FHEQ as being at Masters Level.
16. To meet government agendas on links with industries by enhancing the potential for collaboration between the University and media industries nationally and trans-nationally.

11 Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes for the Degree Programme conform to those defined by the FHEQ as being at Masters Level. The programme outcomes have references to the benchmark statements for Communication, Media, Film and Cultural Studies. The programme provides opportunities for students to define and formulate research problems, questions and hypotheses. It also allows students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, qualities, skills and other attributes in Media Studies and Journalism within academic and professional contexts.

Knowledge and Understanding

On completion, graduates of this programme will have developed:

- A1. a critical and sophisticated understanding of media, culture and society
- A2. an advanced knowledge and understanding of the key approaches to theorising and analysing media and journalism, which is informed by cutting edge research;
- A3. an in-depth knowledge and understanding of media law in a transnational context as it pertains to the journalism profession and media industry;
- A4. an understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of different types of data dissemination and analysis in media, communication and journalism;

A5. an in-depth understanding of key production processes and professional practices relevant to media, cultural and communicative industries. A6. an advanced understanding and knowledge of the ethical responsibilities that a scholar and investigator has towards the object of research; A7.an in-depth knowledge and understanding of professional methods and codes of practice as laid down by the National Union of Journalists; A8.an advanced knowledge and understanding of the power relations inherent in investigative work.
Teaching and Learning Methods The teaching strategy is to offer a combination of lectures, interactive seminars, professional workshop training sessions, and small group tutorials. Students will develop skills in defining and formulating issues for investigation; skills in data collection and analysis for journalism, bibliographic work, and competence in the critical use of sources in the following ways: seminars, independent reading and hands-on experience through written assignments and professional practical work. Students acquire knowledge of ethical issues through team work, presentations, case studies and independent reading.
Assessment Strategy A full range of assessment methods - including group and individual oral presentations, case-study projects, written essay assignments, tests, professional plans and profiles, methodological critiques of selected research studies, practice-based reports, individual and group oral presentations, portfolio of media production work and critical evaluation will be employed. These will reflect the aims and objectives of the programme and the postgraduate level of the degree. The key factor that distinguishes this course from other Masters programmes in media and journalism is the unique combination of a sophisticated analytical approach with intensive practical professional training to provide students with advanced professional journalism skills. The range of assessment reflects this diversity. Assessment requires students to <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. engage with theories and concepts; 2. formulate areas of enquiry and engage with relevant literature; 3. demonstrate a critical understanding of modes of journalistic investigation; 4. develop advanced practical skills associated with the profession of journalism. This will be assessed by a variety of means: oral presentations, case-study and professional reports, essays, methodological critiques of selected research studies, written assignments, portfolios of work to assess students' ability to gather, assimilate and report on news stories or issues, the design and building of a website (online journalism), a video-based report and critical evaluation to assess students' self reflection and critical analysis of the process of their practical work. The Degree Programme Director will assess the Critical Evaluation elements of the Press Association modules in order to maintain a strong thread of teaching quality control and continuity from the University.
Intellectual Skills On completing the programme students should be able to demonstrate: B1. effective problem solving strategies and high level analytical and planning processes; B2.the capacity to define and formulate research problems, questions and hypotheses; B3.the ability to reflect on the relationship between theory and practice; B4.conceptual, theoretical and methodological rigour in the application of knowledge to Media Studies through the compulsory modules Media Analysis and Media Law and the related options; B5. the analytical and critical skills needed to assess and conduct current research and engage in advanced analysis; B6. the ability to critically analyse key theoretical and practical concerns; B7 the ability to assess the strengths and weaknesses of different types of data and to extract information from relevant data sources.

Teaching and Learning Methods
The teaching strategy consists of a combination of lectures, seminars, tutorials, practical workshops, and fieldwork utilising both discipline-specific and team-based problem solving exercises. Students will be provided with teaching and learning strategies that promote a sophisticated understanding of the relationship between theory and practice and of cross-cultural and trans-national issues and contexts in media and journalism through comparative analysis and global contextualisation of the subject matter. Students will learn through completing assignments, practical exercises, professional project work, and portfolios of practical news production work.
Assessment Strategy
Cognitive Skills will be assessed by essay assignments, oral presentations, professional and practical projects including the portfolios of practical news production work and critical evaluation.
Practical Skills
Students on this programme will develop and demonstrate:
C1. the complex practical skills involved in applying principles and techniques of news gathering for the written, on-line, broadcast and video production of news texts C2. the capacity to develop and apply advanced professional skills to the production of journalistic and related practical work; C3. bibliographic and practical skills: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. the skills to identify and retrieve relevant material, including books, journal articles, conference proceedings, statistical data, government and other public reports including resources available online and on the web; b. multi-media journalism skills and competencies in the production of news reports and articles, to include advanced training in conventional and new media technologies. C4. a sophisticated use of methods of evaluating a range of sources, texts and practices using theoretical frameworks that pertain to media, communication and cultural studies; C5. a capacity to reflect critically on the key theoretical, subject-specific and practical concerns of media and journalism, and the journalistic techniques of multi-media news gathering and production; C6. the application of principles and concepts of journalistic production to a number of relevant multi-media contexts; C7. the skills to produce news reports in a range of media forms and to comprehend and manage change in journalism and the media industry.
Teaching and Learning Methods
The teaching strategy is to provide subject specific and professional skills through a range of specialist modules. Students will be provided with teaching and learning strategies that promote the capacity to evaluate and reflect critically on their practical work and apply the principles and concepts of journalistic techniques to a number of contexts. Students will also be given support and guidance by their module leaders on both Compulsory and Option Modules. Students will work independently, in teams and will present their work orally as well as in written form and production form. They will learn through participation in workshops, seminars, lectures, the preparation of oral presentations, tutorials and through intensive professional practical and project work.
Assessment Strategy
These will be assessed through oral presentations, professional and practical reports, written assignments and the critical evaluation assignment.
Transferable/Key Skills
The programme provides the opportunity for students to develop and demonstrate:
D1. the skills to communicate and present research findings effectively to specialist and non-specialist audiences; D2. the skills of effective written and oral communication and presentation; D3. the capacity to manage research effectively, including planning, implementing and producing reports, assignments, and related projects on time;

D4. the skills to manage workloads and to work to deadlines; D5. the skills to work effectively, both independently and as member of teams in both an academic and professional context.
Teaching and Learning Methods The teaching strategy comprises a range of written and practical assessment including essays, reports, written tests, projects, portfolios and other practical work and seminars/workshops in which students are required to make team and individual presentations. This rich variety of modes of assessment provides opportunities for the students to work as a team as well as individually, develop sophisticated ideas and practical skills, improve their problem-solving capacity and work to deadlines. The intensive training at the Press Association in Semester 3 provides specific opportunities for practical journalistic multi-media skills development. In semester 3, students develop writing techniques and interviewing skills, news gathering techniques, reporting skills, studio-based broadcast packages, design for websites, and to apply this comprehensive range of skills in print, broadcast and online contexts.
Assessment Strategy Key Skills will be assessed through oral presentations, practice-based reports, tests, written assignments, portfolios of work, the design and building of a website (online journalism), a video-based report and critical evaluation. Assessments will test, as appropriate, theoretical, empirical and professional knowledge and understanding, together with their application to the profession of journalism. The various modes of assessments will reflect the postgraduate nature and aims of the course. This range permits assessment on an equal footing for students from a wide range of cultural, national and disciplinary backgrounds.

12 Programme Curriculum, Structure and Features
Basic structure of the programme The MA International Multi-Media Journalism combines theoretical, empirical and vocational elements to provide students with advanced proficiency in academic scholarship combined with advanced professional skills. The programme comprises 180 credits of taught modules, 60 of which comprise intensive professional training taken at the Press Association, including a week of intensive training at Howden Hall which offers superior broadcast journalism facilities. All students will be required to take 3, 20 credit modules in each semester. Students will undertake 140 credits of compulsory modules (80 credits at Newcastle University and 60 credits at the Press Association). In addition, 40 credits will be chosen from a prescribed list of optional modules, to be shared with the MA Media and Journalism and MA Media and Public Relations programmes. Compulsory at Newcastle University COM8057 Media Analysis (20 credits) COM8069 Multimedia Journalism: Principles and Practice (20 credits) COM8059 Media Law (20 credits) COM8164 Public Affairs and Social Responsibility (20 credits) Compulsory at Press Association COM8165 Advanced Reporting Skills (20 credits) COM8166 Broadcast and Video Journalism (20 credits) COM8167 Online Journalism (20 credits) Optional COM8061 Professional Sub-editing and Design (20 credits) COM8163 News and Journalism: Critical Studies (20 credits) COM8060 Strategies and Management in Public Affairs (20 credits) COM8001 PR in the Digital Age (20 credits) COM8070 Building a PR Campaign Students can also choose from modules also available to undergraduate students on the BA Media, Communication and Cultural Studies. Students are therefore not permitted to take more than one module from this group:

COM8073 Communication, Emotion and Psychoanalysis (20 credits)

Key features of the programme (including what makes the programme distinctive)

The programme is a combination of academic study and vocational training (under the auspices of a professional body) and the two aspects (academic/vocational) complement inform and enrich the other.

The programme is innovative in its use of recent technological developments in the field of multimedia and online journalism, and associated training practices.

The programme incorporates the latest changes in professional trends in journalism and it is an answer to the need for training the next generation of journalists in the light of these changes (i.e. a shift towards multimedia journalism).

13 Criteria for admission

Entry qualifications

A candidate must either be a University graduate or graduate of an equivalent awarding body with a 2:1 or above degree in the Social Sciences or Humanities; or hold another qualification approved by the Graduate School of the Faculty of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences as equivalent to a degree of a university in the United Kingdom. Preferred subjects include Media Studies, Sociology, Communication Studies, History, English, Geography, Anthropology.

Admissions policy/selection tools

Based on application form in most cases.

Non-standard Entry Requirements

Special cases will be considered individually by the DPD. For example an applicant with a relevant professional qualification and experience in journalism or related areas such as public relations will be considered. The decision will be made on the evidence of professional experience and academic skills by the admission tutor on a case to case basis.

Additional Requirements

None

Level of English Language capability

Overseas candidates whose first language is not English must have IELTS overall 6.5 with at least 6.0 for the written component. Candidates' language proficiency will be monitored by the DPD in association with INTO Newcastle University Centre.

Candidates required to study English Language Modules, as determined by INTO Newcastle University Centre, will substitute optional modules to the value of 20 credits in the first and second semester.

14 Support for Student Learning

Induction

During the first week of the first semester students attend an induction programme. New students will be given a general introduction to University life and the University's principle support services and general information about the School and their programme, as described in the Degree Programme Handbook. New and continuing students will be given detailed programme information and the timetable of lectures/practicals/labs/ tutorials/etc. The International Office offers an additional induction programme for overseas students (see http://www.ncl.ac.uk/international/coming_to_newcastle/orientation.phtml)

There will be an obligatory induction programme hosted by the School of Education, Communication and Language Sciences for all students on the MA programme. The programme handbook will be issued, together with timetable and module choice forms. The DPD will explain the details of the programme structure, curriculum and assessments requirements. Students will have to choose their option modules. The DPD will also explain the structure and intended learning experience over the 3 semesters, explaining carefully the key differences between the first stages of Semesters 1 and 2 at the University and the second stage of Semester 3 at the Press Association. Students will be provided with the relevant information to allow them to cope effectively with the transition from the University to the Press Association Training in Semester 3.

Study skills support

Students will learn a range of Personal Transferable Skills, including Study Skills, as outlined in the Programme Specification. Some of this material, e.g. time management is covered in the appropriate Induction Programme. Students are explicitly tutored on their approach to both group and individual projects.

Induction programme and relevant modules such as Writing for the Media, and Professional Sub-editing and Design will include sessions on skill development such as library use and information search skills, reading skills, and skills in use of computer to produce assignments relevant to the course. Skills in formatting assignments such as referencing and bibliography will be provided across modules, with a specific focus in the compulsory modules. Students are also encouraged to liaise with relevant university services to improve specific skills (INTO Newcastle University Centre for language in-session support, the school liaison librarian for further library research and usage, computer service for IT).

Academic support

The initial point of contact for a student is with a lecturer or module leader, or their tutor (see below) for more generic issues. Thereafter the Degree Programme Director or Head of School may be consulted. Issues relating to the programme may be raised at the Staff-Student Committee, and/or at the Board of Studies.

The DPD, who will operate from the School of Education, Communication and Language Sciences at Newcastle University has the overall responsibility for ensuring organization of the programme and its day-to-day administration and management and will have responsibility for closely co-ordinating the links between the Press Association and the University ensuring that University standards are met. The DPD will co-ordinate closely with the DPD for MA Media and Journalism and MA Media and Public Relations since the compulsory modules and certain options in Media will be shared between the three programmes. All students will have access to the DPD and all the module leaders of this programme for advice and discussion of academic issues arising.

Pastoral support

All students are assigned a personal tutor whose responsibility is to monitor the academic performance and overall well-being of their tutees. Details of the personal tutor system can be found at <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/undergraduate/support/tutor.phtml>

In addition the University offers a range of support services, including one-to-one counselling and guidance or group sessions/workshops on a range of topics, such as emotional issues e.g. stress and anxiety, student finance and budgeting, disability matters etc. There is specialist support available for students with dyslexia and mental health issues. Furthermore, the Union Society operates a Student Advice Centre, which can provide advocacy and support to students on a range of topics including housing, debt, legal issues etc.

The DPD will be closely supervising the various teaching and learning activities during the third semester. As all teaching during this period will be off campus i.e. at the teaching facilities of the Press Association, the DPD will be permanently liaising between the students and the teaching staff of the Press Association. The DPD will make sure that during this semester there will be a continuity in the level of support for the students as in the previous campus based semesters. Students will also be able to access their personal tutors at regular intervals during this time.

Support for students with disabilities

The University's Disability Support Service provides help and advice for disabled students at the University – and those thinking of coming to Newcastle. It provides individuals with: advice about the University's facilities, services and the accessibility of campus; details about the technical support available; guidance in study skills and advice on financial support arrangements; a resources room with equipment and software to assist students in their studies. For further details see <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/disability-support/>

Learning resources

The University's main learning resources are provided by the Robinson and Walton Libraries (for books, journals, online resources), and Information Systems and Services, which supports campus-wide computing facilities, see <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/undergraduate/support/acfacilities.phtml>

All new students whose first language is not English are required to take an English Language test at the INTO Newcastle University Centre. Where appropriate, in-session language training can be provided. INTO Newcastle University Centre houses a range of resources for learning other languages which may be particularly appropriate for those interested in an Erasmus exchange. See <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/undergraduate/support/facilities/langcen.phtml>

15 Methods for evaluating and improving the quality and standards of teaching and learning

Module reviews

All modules are subject to review by questionnaires which are considered by the Board of Studies. Changes to, or the introduction of new, modules are considered at the School Teaching and Learning Committee and at the Board of Studies. Student opinion is sought at the Staff-Student Committee and/or the Board of Studies. New modules and major changes to existing modules are subject to approval by the Faculty Teaching and Learning Committee.

Programme reviews

The Board of Studies conducts an Annual Monitoring and Review of the degree programme and reports to Faculty Teaching and Learning Committee.

External Examiner reports

External Examiner reports are considered by the Board of Studies. The Board responds to these reports through Faculty Teaching and Learning Committee. External Examiner reports are shared with institutional student representatives, through the Staff-Student Committee.

Student evaluations

All modules, and the degree programme, are subject to review by student questionnaires. Informal student evaluation is also obtained at the Staff-Student Committee, and the Board of Studies.

Mechanisms for gaining student feedback

Feedback is channelled via the Staff-Student Committee and the Board of Studies. The Board of Studies will have student representatives and will consider feedback from students and staff, as well as that from the external examiners. The Boards of Studies, external examiners and staff-student committee will be shared with that of the MA Media and Public Relations. A representative of the Press Association will attend all Boards of Studies. The DPD will be responsible for the initial gathering of feedback on individual modules, and where appropriate will discuss issues with staff and students concerned. The Staff Student Committee will discuss issues arising from the programme. A representative of the Press Association will attend all Boards of Studies to ensure comprehensive involvement in the whole programme. All information from staff student committees and other forms of student feedback from Semesters 1 and 2 will be communicated to the Press Association. In addition, the Press Association will hold a staff-student committee session in Semester 3 to ensure that students are coping effectively with the transition to the Press Association Training.

Faculty and University Review Mechanisms

The programme is subject to the University's Internal Subject Review process, see http://www.ncl.ac.uk/aqss/qsh/internal_subject_review/index.php

16 Regulation of assessment

Pass mark

The pass mark is 50 (Postgraduate programmes)

Course requirements

Progression is subject to the University's Masters Degree Progress Regulations, Taught and Research (<http://www.ncl.ac.uk/calendar/university.regs/tpmdepr.pdf>) and Examination Conventions for Taught Masters Degrees (<http://www.ncl.ac.uk/calendar/university.regs/tpmdeprexamconv.pdf>). Limited compensation up to 40 credits of the taught element and down to a mark of 40 is possible and there are reassessment opportunities, with certain restrictions.

Common Marking Scheme

The University employs a common marking scheme, which is specified in the Taught Postgraduate Examination Conventions, namely:

Summary description applicable to postgraduate Masters programmes

Summary description applicable to postgraduate Certificate and Diploma programmes

<50	Fail
50-59	Pass
60-69	Pass with Merit
70 or above	Pass with Distinction

<50	Fail
50 or above	Pass

A representative of the Press Association will attend all Exam Boards to ensure their continuing detailed involvement in the whole of the programme.

Role of the External Examiner

An External Examiner, a distinguished member of the subject community, will be shared with MA Media and Journalism and MA Media and Public Relations, is appointed by Faculty Teaching and Learning Committee, after recommendation from the Board of Studies. The External Examiner is expected to:

- See and approve examination papers
- Moderate examination and coursework marking
- Attend the Board of Examiners
- Report to the University on the standards of the programme

In addition, information relating to the programme is provided in:

The University Prospectus (see <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/postgraduate/>)

The School Brochure (contact enquiries@ncl.ac.uk)

The University Regulations (see <http://www.ncl.ac.uk/calendar/university.regs/>)

The Degree Programme Handbook

Please note. This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and of the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve if she/he takes full advantage of the learning opportunities provided. The accuracy of the information contained is reviewed by the University and may be checked by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education.
