Philosophy

Martin's coaching philosophy is based around inspiring players to be the best that they can be:

'Be prepared to work hard in all aspects of your game, listen and learn. Know your strengths, recognise your weaknesses, and make them your strengths. Grit and determination together with a belief in your own abilities. Respect everyone around you and they will respect you in turn.'

Richard Eaton - Assistant Badminton Coach

Playing & Coaching Career

Rich is a Level 2 accredited coach and the Head Coach of the Falkland Islands, leading the team at the 2018 Commonwealth Games. He still trains and plays at a high level, representing Northumberland as a senior player and Elmfield in the NBA leagues.

Our Facilities

Newcastle University Sport Centre is ideally located on campus in the city, close to most first year accommodation. Sports Hall 1 in the South Wing offers eight badminton courts and a viewing gallery allowing spectators to get a great view of the action. Sports Hall 2 in the North Wing has six badminton courts and is painted blue to avoid clashes with shuttlecocks and table tennis balls. Both halls accommodate the badminton club's training and fixtures. Club members can also book individual courts two weeks in advance, free of charge. If you want to play every day, you can!

Newcastle University Sport Centre offers a world class, 180 station gym for all members but also two modern strength and conditioning suites for scholars and performance teams where our passionate coaches are on hand to monitor athletic progress.

Our strength and conditioning department supports high performance student-athletes in their pursuit of sporting excellence. They provide individualised coaching delivered within a programme of athletic development and injury mitigation. Alongside Martin, they work hard to develop our students into robust and powerful athletes able to cope with the high demands of competitive badminton.
